Resident Unveils the Drift Pendant by Michael Young

Resident is pleased to announce the launch of Drift, the first lighting design created for the brand by British designer Michael Young. Known internationally for his precise yet poetic approach to design, Young introduces a pendant that exemplifies refined engineering and restrained elegance.

Drift is defined by a mathematically calibrated form engineered to emit light uniformly across its entire surface—a notable technical achievement that elevates the pendant beyond conventional lighting. Offered in two sizes, Drift can be installed singularly or arranged in clusters, with each vantage point revealing a subtly shifting silhouette.

The design draws inspiration from pebble stone paving, invoking a sense of calm and understated tactility reminiscent of natural landscapes.

Quote from the designer

“It is a pure and simple, mathematically formed light that relies on its purity of form and materiality to distribute light over 100% of the surface—which, in this technique, is a great challenge. It presently comes in two sizes and has the ability to stand alone or exist in a cluster. No matter which way you look at the light, that shape will never look the same.”

The Drift pendant is suited to both residential and commercial interiors. Its refined presence complements spatial compositions without contention, offering a nuanced interplay of light and form that enhances the atmosphere with subtlety and depth.
