Resident introduces Little Fellas by Jamie McLellan.

Resident is thrilled to unveil Little Fellas, a compact collection of solid oak furniture consisting of three side tables and a coat stand. Each piece is direct, functional, and sculptural in its form.

Built from stacked timber with exposed joinery, Little Fellas is an exercise in honest construction. Designed to flat-pack, the collection is practical without compromising on material integrity or presence. These pieces sit comfortably beside a sofa, at the bedside, or waiting patiently by the door. They are all adaptable, unpretentious, and made to last.

“Little Fellas came to life quickly and naturally became a family. They’re related to some of my earlier pieces for Resident, but a little more integrated in form. They’re well suited to solid timber — a material Resident does so well and has a really good understanding of. These pieces are quite honest, we felt there was no need to be too clever or to overcomplicate. I’m really proud of them.”

Referencing design cues from McLellan’s early Flyover Table and the more recent Plane collection, Little Fellas carries a familiar language, stripped back and refined. Functional, well-resolved, and full of personality, The Little Fellas speak quietly but confidently.
